eLIB PROGRAMME

The eLib programme is a £15 million UK initiative to deal with the pressures on Library resources caused by the rapid expansion of student numbers and the worldwide 'explosion' in academic knowledge. These problems were recognised in the 1993 report of the Joint Funding Council's Libraries Review Group, chaired by Professor Sir Brian Follett.

The objectives of the eLib programme include the use of IT to improve delivery of information through increased use of electronic libraries services, to allow academic libraries to cope better with growth, to explore different models of intellectual property management and to encourage new methods of scholarly publishing.
